Taylor & Francis Journals Now Available Under a New NESLi2 Licence

Following positive and fruitful negotiations, Taylor & Francis Journals is delighted to confirm a new NESLi2 agreement with JISC Collections for the period of 2012 to 2014. This new agreement provides libraries with access to full text journal content from more than 1,300 titles published between 1997 and the present via the Taylor & Francis Library. Customers can licence this content as the Social Science & Humanities Library (SSH), the Science & Technology Library (S&T), or as the Taylor & Francis Library which combines the two with a guaranteed price cap.

All customers who have an existing arrangement with Taylor & Francis may convert to the NESLi2 licence if they commit to its three year term. In doing so they are guaranteed a low cap on year-on-year pricing for the Taylor & Francis Library. Customers with no current arrangement can add substantial amounts of journal content to their existing subscriptions by paying one annual access fee, the amount of which is based on their JISC banding.

To take advantage of this latest agreement, customers who place orders for online-only subscriptions and the SSH and/or S&T access fees may do so via JISC Collections, via an agent, or with Taylor & Francis direct. Print-plus-online subscriptions must be placed via an agent or with Taylor & Francis direct. Renewal and payment must reach Taylor & Francis by 30th November 2011 (via JISC Collections or your agent of choice) to secure these improved terms, but institutions are free to order and pay after this date.

All journal content provided under the NESLi2 licence is hosted on the Taylor & Francis Online platform which offers fully COUNTER-compliant usage statistics.

The agreement negotiated with JISC Collections also offers libraries a 75% discount off the subscription price of the FRESH Journals Collection which currently contains approximately 150 new journals not included in the SSH or S&T Libraries.

Taylor & Francis looks forward to its renewed partnership with JISC Collections. UK Journals Sales Manager, Mark Howard, commented, 'Taylor & Francis welcomes the endorsement from JISC Collections. Joining forces makes sense for us, and for our customers. It means that the Taylor & Francis Library will be distributed and delivered with complete confidence to the UK academic community'.
